One was a Russian Finn named Johnson and the other was a Gilbert Islander. They told him that they were on the Tahiti when she capsized on October 10 last and with four others they escaped in a boat. They had no food or water in their tiny craft and suffered terribly from hunger and thirst. Finally one of their number, a woman and native of the Gilbert Islands, died, and for a time they subsisted on her flesh. All the time they were suffering terrible agonies died, and for a time they subsisted on her flesh. All the time they were suffering terrible agonies from thirst and finally two others of their number, also Gilbert Islanders, drank sea water and shortly after went mad. In this condition they plunged into the sea and were drowned. The boat with Johnson and his companion eventually drifted on the Mexican coast, where they were rescued and cared for by fishermen. The islander, according to the Mexican, has recovered from his terrible experience, but Johnson was still sick when he left.

After the hubbub had somewhat subsided Col. Wilson notified him in a speech of ten minutes' duration that he had been nominated for the presidency.

COL. WILSON'S ADDRESS

Col. Wilson said: "We bring to you tonight a message from the Thousand Isles through Canada by way of democratic party. We come as a committee from its national convention, representing every democratic constituency in the country, to give you official notification that you have been chosen as its candidate for the office of President of the United States. We are also charged with the duty of presenting you the platform of principles adopted by that conven-tion. This platform contains a full and explicit declaration of the position of the national democratic party on the great political issues of the day; but in all its utterances it is merely a development of one great principle—that whatever governments and laws can do for a people must be done for all the people, without precedence of section or grades of citizenship. ill licit declaration of the position of the national democratic party on the great political issues of the day; but in all its utterances it is merely a development of one great principle—that whatever governments and laws cau do for a people must be done for all the people, without precedence of section or grades of citizenship.

"We believe that a government administered in this spirit in such a country as ours will see in this spirit in such a country as ours will see our a larger measure of freedom and prosperity to the people than has heretofore been possible in the world, and that it will be an example and an inspiration to all mankind. To make and keep ours such a government, to guard with jealous care the rights of equal citizenship, to bear our freedom safely along the march of our material progress unharmed by the mighty agencies that minister to that progress—that is the high and glorious duty of the democratic party; a duty that commits it to never-ending warfare with the strongest and most enduring force of human nature, the last of power shd the lust of greed. I find much relief in the reflection that I have been selected merely to stand for the principles and purposes to which my party is pledged, and for the enforcement and supremacy of which all who have any right to claim democratic fellowship must constantly and persistently labor.

"Our party responsibility is indeed great. We assume a momentous obligation to our countrymen when in return for their trust and confidence we promise them a rectification of their wrongs, and a better realization of the advantages which are due to them under our free and beneficent institutions. But if our responsibility is great our party is strong. It is strong in its sympathy with the needs of the people, in its insistence upon the exercise of governmental powers strictly within the constitutional permission the people have granted, and in its willingness to risk its life and hope upon the people is intelligence and patriotism. Never has a great party, intent upon the promotion of right and justice, had better incentive for effort than is now presented to us.
